Add on Certificate Course in Law and Human Rights for Undergraduate Students

Ignorance of law is not an excuse, is the legal principle accepted the world over. Law is all pervading. Almost all your actions are regulated by law. Law can be statutory, customary, moral or ethical, ecclesiastical etc. But it is well known that ignorance of any of these laws cannot constitute an excuse. Every person is presumed to know the law or ought to have known the law – is the meaning of the dictum. Legal awareness facilitates adherence to the rule of law and empowers people to demand justice, accountability and effective remedies at all levels.

The objectives of the proposed Certificate Course in basic legal principles are the following:

Objectives:

- To develop a habit of analytical thinking and logical reasoning as technique for decision making.
- To deepen the understanding of different realms of legal implications in matters related to family, society and inheritance; rights & freedoms; lives & livelihood; civil, political & religious rights; civil & criminal jurisprudence; health & environment etc.
- To achieve and to promote the skill and ability to analyze various problems from a legal perspective.
- To understand and to discern the distinctions between different branches of courts and their distinctive jurisdictions in the prevailing legal system.
- To be able to understand the differences and choices between different judicial procedures and alternative judicial mechanisms.
- To enhance self confidence, ability to articulate and assert own views for effective communications and to develop critical thinking.
